

Carlow, Ireland - Firestation

Setting the scene

We often see a number of our distribution partners looking at ways to use our technology, to further the environment or as a community project.

This was certainly the case when one of Nolan Heating installed one of our SAHP 300s in their local firehouse in Carlow, Ireland this was a fantastic opportunity to ensure the team of firefighters would benefit from generating their own hot water ready for when they needed it.

The system has now been installed for a while and caters for the stations various teams. This is a great example of how flexible the SAHP range is - Our product range offers a hot water solution for all scenarios from a single occupant to a commercial environment where hot water is needed for the various teams working around the clock.
