

Beachcomber Hotel, Mauritius

Setting the scene

When imagining the perfect white sandy beach many people's idea will be based on a Mauritian beach.

And so, when we were contacted by our future distribution and installation partner looking to install across the island, it was only a matter of time before he visited us, spending a week learning more about the product, how our range works and how it would perfectly suit the demands of the local market.

With a concentration on the commercial market, our distribution partner went on to install our BMTB range across several exclusive resort complexes across the country, with installations confirmed across different sites on the island, including the Beachcomber Resort and Hotel.

Although our product range is suited to many different weather conditions, the tropical heat sees the hotel chain benefit even more from how the systems work – ensuring hot water every day, all year.
